The Quality Management Forum is the quarterly refereed publication of the Quality Management Division (QMD) of the American Society for Quality (ASQ). The Forum includes articles on quality management as well as information on QMD activities such as the annual conference and the certified quality manager program.

The Quality Management Forum (QMF) is a quarterly peer reviewed journal that reaches over 20,000 QMD members. Its primary function is to communicate useful information on the application of quality management principles. Feature articles are the mainstay of the QMF. Through them, quality practitioners share their insight and experience on the application of quality management concepts, principles, techniques, and tools with our members.

You do not need to be a member of QMD or even ASQ to publish an article in the Forum. You just need a relevant quality management related story to share with our readers. QMF does not publish articles that promote an organization's or individual's products or services. QMF articles are independent of any organization or individual marketing efforts.

Submitted manuscripts are reviewed by two or more QMF editorial board members, and the process is usually completed within 60 days. Articles may also receive technical edits by subject matter experts for the author to consider as necessary. Final decisions are made by the editor. In many cases, we will ask the authors for revisions prior to final approval for publication.
